

THE FIELDS

Helen Macdowell gets hit in the face with a hockey ball. That's how it starts. Yes. The beginning of the end. All downhill from there. Helen's beautiful. She's got this light brown wavy flowy hair that curls back from her forehead. Her face is...

Reader's Opinions

I received my copy free through the Goodreads First Reads giveaways. Tackling issues like abortion rights and sexual abuse at the hands of a priest certainly take some nerve, especially for a debut novel. But somehow, Kevin Maher manages this with an overall sense of optimism throughout his coming of age tale, The Fields . While the...

The five-star rating here is giving The Fields benefit of the doubt. So why the benefit of the doubt? It might be because I just finished a day of binge-reading less than ten minutes ago (which speaks volumes about the book anyway) and am still feverishly overexcited about what I just read. Or it might be the strength of the narrative...
